*See GRAPEVINE, Table 8, page 1374 (June 1976).

On July 1, 1976, the mid-point of the calendar year and the beginning of a new fiscal year for many of the states, GRAPEVINE had relayed to its readers the figures for fiscal 1977 for twenty-seven states. As we may have written in this space before, the states reported are mostly smaller or medium-sized as to population. With a few exceptions, the larger states, such as California, New York, Pennsylvania and Illinois, are yet to be reported. At this mid-point one must remark that the early-reporting states have set an excellent example of progress for their more populous (and often wealthier per capita) neighbors. The national economy seems no longer to be slipping downward, and the psychological panic of 1975 is probably somewhat abated. The excitements and uncertainties of a quadrennial national election year will continue with us. Only time will tell how much tax support of higher education will gain as a nationwide priority. The record thus far is good.

^{}Adjusted upward to account for a recent updating of the 1974-76 total for Hawaii.

⁺Adjusted upward to account for the addition of funds for area vocational and technical institutes in Minnesota, reported in GRAPEVINE, page 1376 (June 1976). ++Revised to reflect changes in the totals reported in footnotes above.

The 1976 legislature enacted a new structure and functions for a new state-level coordinating body, an 11-member State Board for Higher Education. The board will have the usual coordinating duties, and will have an elaborate system of advisory committees representing the different segments (levels) of higher education, and also others representing students, faculty and other constituencies.

The legislation implements the report of a Task Force headed by Alan M. Wilner, appointed by the governor in May 1975.

U. S. Supreme Court Decides Maryland's Direct State Aid to Denominational Colleges Does Not Offend U.S.Constitution

On June 21, 1976, by a vote of 5 to 4 of the Justices, the Supreme Court arrived at a judgment which may have widespread effects on the future development of tax support of higher education in the United States.

Maryland's direct appropriations of state tax funds to church-related colleges, for portions of their annual operating expenses, in a policy begun by the 1971 legislature, is sustained as constitutional. The tax funds must be used for secular educational purposes, and not to advance any particular religious doctrine or any teaching of theology or divinity.

Actually there was no single majority opinion. Justice Harry A. Blackmun wrote one in which he was jointed by Chief Justice Warren E. Burger and Justice Lewis F. Powell. Justice Byron R. White wrote a concurring opinion, joined by Justice William H. Rehnquist, thus making a majority of five in agreement as to the result.

A dissenting opinion was entered by Justice William J. Brennan, joined by Justice Thurgood Marshall. They stressed that the grants are "general subsidies," tending to "promote interdependence between religion and state which the First Amendment is designed to prevent." Another dissent was filed by Justice John Paul Stevens and Justice Potter Stewart.
